Montréal is the largest city in Canada's province of Québec. It's set on an island in the Saint Lawrence River and is named after Mont Royal, the triple-peaked hill at its heart. Its boroughs, many of which were once independent cities, include neighbourhoods ranging from cobblestoned, French-colonial Vieux-Montréal – with the Gothic Revival Notre-Dame Basilica at its centre – to the bohemian Plateau. An ethnically diverse city, where a multitude of languages are spoken with French being the most dominant. The Province of Québec is located above the northeastern United States, including the states of New York and Vermont.

Average temperatures in the summer months hover around 20-25 degrees Celsius, and average temperatures in the winter months can range from approximately 1 to -10 degrees Celsius. On average, Montréal gets approximately 2,000 hours of sunshine each year.

The Lucien-L'Allier commuter rail terminal, to which it is connected, is next door on that corner. In addition, it is located across the street from the 1250 René-Lévesque skyscraper. It is easily accessible by public transportation, as it is linked to both Lucien-L'Allier and Bonaventure Metro stations. It is also connected to the underground city and Central Station.

A legend in the heart of Montréal, the Fairmont The Queen Elizabeth Hotel is conveniently located in the middle of downtown Montréal on top of Central Station. Since opening its doors on April 15, 1958, the largest hotel in the city has a special place in the heart of Montrealers' and visitors from around the world. Since 1958, The Queen Elizabeth has been a reference in the world of luxury hospitality and a proud partner of the city's vibrant social community. In 1961, the hotel was connected to Place Ville Marie by a corridor below street level that launched the first link to the Underground City. During Expo 67, fifty of the sixty visiting heads of state stayed in its luxurious suites. In 1969, John Lennon and Yoko Ono held their famous "Bed-In for Peace" during which the ex-Beatle composed and recorded Give Peace a Chance, a song that quickly became a worldwide peace anthem. In 1976, the hotel was chosen as headquarters for the International Olympic Committee and welcomed dignitaries and international delegations. Over the last few decades, prestigious personalities, such as the members of British royal family, kings, queens, and movie stars have graced us with their visit. Of course, the hotel is not only for celebrities, it takes great pride in being part of the cherished memories and milestones of Montréal families and corporations.
